WHAT god it was I cannot say, But one there was, when Jove was king. Who, wandering by some Grecian bay, Picked up a vacant shell that lay Bleached on the shore, a dry, unsav'ry thing.

Nor is my memory well informed, (No Lempriere's at hand, to blab) What tenant had this mansion warmed, Something with which the Ægean swarmed, Some lobster, I suppose it was, or crab.

But he, the cunning brat of heaven, Trimmed it according to his wish, Crossed it with fibres-three, or seven, Or as Pausanias thinks-eleven. And gave a language to the poor, dead fish.

At ence the house which e'n when filled By its old habitant, was dumb. Now as th' immortal artist willed, A little sea-Odéon trilled, And trembled low to the celestial thumb. Enraptured with his new invention,

Up soared he to the blissful seat, And having caught even Jove's attention, And calmed a family dissension, Went serenading through the starry street.

With us, the story's the reverse-Our souls are born already strung, But, 'twixt the cradle and the hearse Creeps a change oe'r us-for the worse! The heart hath music only when 'tis young.

For soon there comes a sordid god, Who snaps the precious chords of sound, And leaves the soul an empty pod. A yellow husk-a dull, hard clod-A faded shell, in which no voice is found.

Save when some bold, heroic hand That dares to strike the tyrant Time, Tries its first impulse to command, And thrilling through the startled land,

Wastes the last ebbings of his youthin Rhyme Tasso's Prison .- The cell is indescribably vile and wants all the elements even of a picturesque dungeon. It is a dust-hole under a mad-house; its walls, like those of any other resort for rats or spiders, are blackened and defaced; yet our desperate English carbonari have charcoaled here as every where else where the pencil would not work-smoked their accomplished names, and compelled the door to feel many a sharp stiletto nibbling at its panels for the same noble purpose. Were it not for that tablet of marble inserted into the front wall to announce that this is no vulgar dungeon, you would pass on; but with that information what thoughts arise! If we love to think that the Rhapsodist of the Iliad, that Prince of Troubadours, recited, amidst applauding Greece, the deeds of his heroes under his country's planetrees, or on the shores of the hoarse Ægean; if we are glad to know that Virgil had his knife and fork at the tables of Augustus and Mæcenas, what a pain to recollect that Tasso modulated the exquisite stanzas of his not less immortal epic (worthy to be sung to the harp of Ossian at the banquet of all the princes of the earth) amidst the humiliation and despendency of a dangeon! What fools men are to endure despots! They bring a light and they bring a key; bars there are none, nor bolts; the prisoner has been gone for four centuries oxygen has entirely eaten up the old iron lock time has reduced to dust the hand that applied the key; the duke's brow is still contracted, but it is only in the discolored marble of his tomb; and the despot (and there is nothing in Italy but despotism) who made men quail and cower at his presence, is a disarticulated and unsightly skeleton! This is one of the places where one is compelled to feel in its full truth the "quantula sint hominum corpuscula." As to the imprisonment of any thing human in such a place, how any man could have borne it a month, and have lived to come out again, is our marvel ;- a hero or a common criminal would have died surely; no prose existence could have stood it !- a nightingale frets himself to death in a cage, even though he be not shut up with toys and mock-birds, but the creative mind of the poet makes, to a certain extent, its own place every where; and though it could not fabricate a heaven out of such a hell, even to a Tasso, it did not prevent him from carrying the prodigious resources of his mind into moods of being far, far beyond his prison-bars. The door opens to the gentlest pressure, and the light of day, with the verdure of a small garden near one spot, make more emphatic the silence of the un-windowed cell. In Tasso's time there was a small window, a very small one; it is walled up, but the marks of its dimensions are visible in the old brickwork; and we see that, standing by it, he might,

by straining a little, and standing sideways, behold a few inches of the blue sky over the gable-ends of his tyrant's palace! In one corner of his square area of twelve feet was his pallet, and here he must have sat, if, indeed, he, like Ariosto, had a chair to sit on! While we are thus curiously and intently surveying for a few minutes every foot of the small cell, our guide points to where Byron sat nearly the whole day ruminating, and without light, till he had remotely felt the kind of suffering which a brother poet had so long borne in silence.

Te the mercantile, professional and traveling part of the community this truly great invention is of infinite value as it is a great saving of time, trouble and expense. The principal advantage to be derived from the manifold writer is, it is a great saving of time, trouble and expense. The principal advantage to be derived from the manifold writer is, that a copy of any document may be kept without any additional trouble to the writer, and without any necessity of using either an inkstand or a pen. The instrament used for writing is an agate point, consequently it never wears by use. For banks, insurance offices, merchants, men of business generally, lawyers, postmasters, editors, reporters, public offices, and all who may be desirous of preserving copies of their letters, documents, &c. with an immense saving of time and the satisfaction of having an exact copy of what they have written, this will be found invaluable.

operation two years, during which time the proprietor has had the pleasure of receiving the unleigned approbation of all whose observation it has come under. At the late fair of the American Institute the merits of the article were examined into by three of the most able chemists in the country, who pronounced it to be a very ingenious and useful contrivance, and not liable to change color by exposure to air, mosture, or chemical agents. Consequently a medal was awarded by the Institute. Price from $2 to $5.

WHAT IS LIFE Without Health ?-VV Philadelphia, December, 1857.—To Dr. Jayne—Dear Sir: The astonishing and almost miraculous effects your ex-pectorant had on my neighbor, the Rev. Mr. Busting, whose case you will recollect, was given over by his physicians, and who himself had lost all hope of ever being permitted to preach again, but who, from the use of your medicine, is so far restored as not only to be able to walk out, but also to preach, made so wonderful an impression on my mind, that after consulting with several friends and learning that you were a regular Practitioner of Medicine, and that you remedy was not one of those quarkish compounds with you were a regular Practitioner of Medicine, and intaryour remedy was not one of those quackish compounds with which the public are so frequently duped—for you must know that I am a mortal enemy to quacks—I called upon you and purchased half a dozen boules, and told you that, if I lived to take them, you should have a good report from

The following is especially recommended to the attention of gentlemen of the Naval and Merchant service.

I, Henry B. Nones, Captain in the United States Revenue Service, in the service of the United States, do certify that I was for five months afflicted with the Indammatory Rhenmatism, and had tried every remedy by advice of physicians, without any relief—and finally, by advice of Dr. William Rockwell, Health Officer at Quarantine, I applied to Dr. M. B. Cohen, in the month of Joly, 1837, for a bottle of his Rheumatic Embrocation, and after one week's use of the specific was entirely free from pain and able to resume any New York. April 25, 1859 pecific, was entirely free from pain and able to resume my place in the service.
